

What I hope is that with this announcement, we're underscoring both our seriousness in meeting the energy challenge and our willingness to look at this challenge not as a partisan issue but as a matter that's far more important than politics because the choices we make will affect not just the next generation but many generations to come.

Yesterday I announced loan guarantees to break ground on America's first new nuclear power plant in nearly three decades -??? a plant that will create thousands of construction jobs and 800 permanent jobs in years to come.

A story in the paper just the other day said that many small businesses may see their premiums rise about 15 percent over the coming year twice the rate they rose last year.

All that you've achieved, I believe that the CIA's best days are still yet to come.

And months passed.

And every Nevadan should know the strength and the character of a man that I hope and expect to serve in Washington for many years to come.

And for those of us who have been in public life before, these kinds of moments come around just every so often.

And frankly, when you're trying to navigate your way through this economy, you should n't feel like you're getting ripped off by " any time, any reason " rate hikes, and payment deadlines that seem to move around every month.

And given all that has happened in your two decades on Earth, just imagine what you can create in the years to come.

And I am looking forward to continuing to see the great work that you guys do in the years to come.

And I can promise you that more help is on the way in the weeks and months to come.

And I hope that I will be your partner in trying to bring about that unity of purpose in the years to come.

And I look forward to working with all of you in the years to come.

And I look forward to working with all of you to fulfill them in the months and years to come.

And I look forward to working with both parties in Congress to make this reform a reality in the months to come.

And I want you to know that not a day goes by when I do n't think about those efforts of yours.

And I want you to know that not a single day goes by that I do n't think about the obligation that I have to keep that promise alive for every single American and every single Coloradoan.

And I will, I hope, do something to make government trustworthy in the eyes of the American people in the days and weeks, months and years to come.

And I'm absolutely confident that if we keep on moving forward, if we refuse to turn backwards, if we're willing to show the same kind of fighting spirit as Harry Reid has shown throughout his career, then out of this storm brighter days are going to come.

And I'm confident that if we continue to draw strength from our common aspirations and purpose from our common objectives, if we continue to act, as we have during this visit, in a spirit of mutual responsibility, mutual respect, and mutual interest, then that is a truth that we will uphold together in the months and years to come.

And I'm going to keep on needing him in the Senate in the years to come.

And I'm very much looking forward to developing the kind of relationship between Mexico and the United States that will allow all the children here and all the children in both countries to thrive for years to come.

And if we fail to act, federal spending on Medicaid and Medicare will grow over the coming decades by an amount almost equal to the amount our government currently spends on our nation's defense.

And if you're willing to invest in our future, we are going to keep on moving forward for years and decades to come.

And if your inland waters are contaminated if the bays and bayous are contaminated it could be devastating, changing the way of life down here for years to come.

And in the years to come, all Americans will be fortunate to have his service as our United States Ambassador to Ireland.

And in the long years that followed, a Navy family and this city would endure the heartache of the unknown.

And it is a proposal whose time has come.

And it is paid for, and it's a proposal whose time has come.

And long after our time on this Earth has passed, one word will still bring forth the pride and awe of men and women who will never meet the heroes who sit before us: D-Day.

And make no mistake, that is exactly what will happen if we allow this moment to pass and that's an outcome that is unacceptable to me and it's unacceptable to you, the American people.

And now is the time to move forward, not back.

And our own royalty, somebody who we have become so extraordinarily proud of, somebody who I've just come to adore and who is going to make us proud for many, many years to come because she is not term limited, the newest justice of the Supreme Court, Sonia Sotomayor.

And out of this long political darkness a brighter day will come.

And over the decades that followed, she displayed a range like few others sometimes the middle ranges as a mezzo ; sometimes the highs of a soprano ; sometimes both in the same performance.

And sadly, it will continue to be true in unstable regions for years to come.

And rarely has a day gone by that I have n't heard from somebody personally whether in a letter, or an email, or at a town hall who's reminded me of why it was so important that we not give up ; who reminded me why we could not quit.

And so her extraordinary leadership is one of the reasons why the House of Representatives has consistently set the bar on a whole host of issues that and legislative accomplishments that we've seen this year this past year, and that we're going to see this year coming up.

And so if you will stand with me, and if you will stand with all these outstanding candidates in the weeks to come, I promise you, we will work as hard as we have ever worked for as long as it takes to create the kind of America that our children and our grandchildren deserve.

And that obviously is in striking contrast to the Falcon 9 rocket we just saw on the launch pad, which will be tested for the very first time in the coming weeks.

And that will create thousands of jobs across the country thousands of jobs across the country, not just this year, not just next year, but for decades to come.

And that's incredibly important, because for the vast majority of you, the day will come -??? and it will probably sooner than you like ???- when you wo n't be known primarily as a hockey player or a tennis player or a baseball player anymore.

And that's what, at root, will lead to greater opportunities and brighter horizons for the next generation and for generations to come.

And the time has come to aggressively accelerate that transition.

And the choices that we make in the coming years will determine whether the future will be shaped by fear or by freedom ; by poverty or by prosperity ; by strife or by a just, secure and lasting peace.

And their ideas will help us form a 21st century strategy for America's great outdoors to better protect our natural landscape and our history for generations to come.

And they know that the actions we honor today were not a passing moment of courage.

And this is a country that will lead and prosper for generations to come.

And this is part of broader health reform, about which I'll have more to say in the coming days, which will both cut costs and improve care.

And this is something that I expect to work with Congress to deal with in the weeks and months to come.

And this legislation is long overdue, and it's been a long time coming.

And we are going to be digging ourselves out from that destructive force for years to come.

And we are going to be thinking about you and your family each and every day in the coming months.

And we plan to continue this conversation in the coming months, holding forums and roundtables in communities across the country, so we can seek out more good ideas and best practices that we can adopt and promote.

And we want to build a lasting partnership founded upon mutual interests and mutual respect, and I'm looking forward to returning to Afghanistan many times in the years to come.

And we'll put the entire Pell Grant program on firmer footing for years to come.

And we're also making loan repayments more manageable for over 1 million more students in the coming years, so students at UT-Austin, and across this country, don't graduate with massive loan payments each month.

And we're going to make sure that Barbara Boxer is in office for an awful long time to come, whether Stu likes it or not.

And when the moment came, they did what they were trained to do.

And while the decades that followed were not without their challenges, the spirit of that first visit is with us today the same sense of possibility, the same hope for the future.

And, by the way, one of the changes that I would like to see and I'm going to be talking about this in weeks to come is once again seeing our best and our brightest commit themselves to making things engineers, scientists, innovators.

And, Pittsburgh, I want you to know, the votes may not be there right now, but I intend to find them in the coming months.

And, when the time comes, to pass that sense of an education's value down to your children, a sense of personal responsibility and self-respect.

As November approaches, leaders in the other party will campaign furiously on the same economic arguments they've been making for decades.

Because not only would this spur hiring by businesses it would create jobs in sectors with incredible potential to propel our economy for years, for decades to come.

Because of recent progress: not just in biology, genetics and medicine, but also in physics, chemistry, computer science, and engineering: we have the potential to make enormous progress against diseases in the coming decades.

Building on the tax cuts in the Recovery Act, we're proposing a complete elimination of capital gains taxes on small business investment along with an extension of write-offs to encourage small businesses to expand in the coming year.

But a new year has come.

But by taking these steps we'll help foster the kind of broadly shared growth that will serve us in the years and the decades to come.

But each day went by without any orders to halt construction so they kept on working and they kept on building.

But even as we've worked to end this immediate crisis, we've also taken some historic measures to build a new foundation for growth and prosperity that can help secure our economic future for generations to come.

But even as we've worked to end this immediate crisis, we've also taken some historic measures to build a new foundation for growth and prosperity that can help secure our economic future for generations to come.

But even more, I am proud to go to India, and I look forward to the history that we will make together ???- progress that will be treasured not just by this generation but by generations to come.

But few told the story of the days that followed.

But I can feel spring coming.

But if we move forward with purpose and resolve with a deepened appreciation of how fundamental the American Dream is and how fragile it can be when we fail to live up to our collective responsibilities, if we go back to our roots, our core values, I am absolutely confident we will overcome this crisis and once again secure that dream not just for ourselves but for generations to come.

But in the words of Scripture, the time has come to set aside childish things.

But more than anything, it will take a willingness to look past our differences, to act in good faith, to refuse to continue the failures of the past, and to take on this challenge together for the benefit not just of this generation, but generations to come.

But our time of standing pat, of protecting narrow interests and putting off unpleasant decisions that time has surely passed.

But the cause endured and the struggle continued, waged by the family of Matthew Shepard, by the family of James Byrd, by folks who held vigils and led marches, by those who rallied and organized and refused to give up, by the late Senator Ted Kennedy who fought so hard for this legislation and all who toiled for years to reach this day.

But that also means we're going to have an expertise in a sector that's just going to keep on growing all around the world for years to come.

But we also know that in the coming decades, a high school diploma is not going to be enough.

But we also know that in the coming years, jobs requiring at least an associate's degree are projected to grow twice as fast as jobs requiring no college experience.

But we have built into law all sorts of measures that in the years to come, health care inflation, which has been rising about three times as fast as people's wages, is finally going to start slowing down.

But we know that in the coming years, jobs requiring at least an associate degree are projected to grow twice as fast as jobs requiring no college experience.

By cutting out the middleman, we'll save American taxpayers $ 68 billion in the coming years $ 68 billion.

By insisting that the reforms that we're introducing are deficit-neutral over the next decade, and by making the reforms that will help slow the growth rate of health care costs over the coming decades bending the curve we can look forward to faster economic growth, higher living standards, and falling, instead of rising, budget deficits.

Congress and the previous administration took difficult but necessary action in the days and months that followed.

Every once in a while, every once in a while a moment comes where you have a chance to vindicate all those best hopes that you had about yourself, about this country, where you have a chance to make good on those promises that you made in all those town meetings and all those constituency breakfasts and all that traveling through the district, all those people who you looked in the eye and you said, you know what, you're right, the system is not working for you and I'm going to make it a little bit better.

Finally, I've asked Tim Geithner and Karen Mills to convene a conference in the coming weeks that will bring together regulators, congressional leaders, lenders and small businesses to determine what additional steps we can take to get credit flowing to small businesses that want to expand and create more jobs.

He invited them sailing, played with their children, and would write each family a letter whenever the anniversary of that terrible day came along.

He told me he'd joined the Marines and was heading to Iraq the following week.

I actually think that we could get all those folks together, and we could come up with a solution that would ensure stability of the Social Security system for a long, long time to come.

I also know this : We ca n't let this moment pass us by.

I am absolutely confident that if I've got your help, that we can make it happen, and we are going to see a stronger, more prosperous Michigan in the years to come.

I have carried this message from London to Ankara ; from Port of Spain to Moscow ; from Accra to Cairo ; and it is what I will speak about today because the time has come for the world to move in a new direction.

I have the fullest confidence that if we think boldly and we act quickly and fully devote ourselves to the work at hand, then out of this ordeal will come a better day and a brighter future for our children and our grandchildren.

I hope the Senate acts in a bipartisan fashion, as it has in confirming Judge Sotomayor twice before, and as swiftly as possible so that she can take her seat on the Court in September and participate in deliberations as the Court chooses which cases it will hear this coming year.

I hope this is a prelude to further cooperation in the days and months to come, as we continue to work on digging our way out of the recession and rebuilding our economy in a way that works for all Americans and not just some Americans.

I know that every day that passes without a resolution is a deep disappointment to those men and women who continue to be discharged under this policy patriots who often possess critical language skills and years of training and who've served this country well.

I know this nation has been through incredibly difficult times.

I look forward to working with her in the years to come.

I promised Judy Shepard, when she saw me in the Oval Office, that this day would come, and I'm glad that she and her husband Dennis could join us for this event.

I'll bet they had the same feelings that you do you're a little sad to see the summer go, but you're also excited about the possibilities of a new year.

I'm committed to these efforts, and I pledge to work tirelessly on behalf of these issues in the months and years to come.

I'm confident that American soccer will remain something to be excited about for years to come.

I'm just looking for eight or 10 of you you know ? I mean, the day has passed when I expected this to be a full partnership.

I'm here today because I'm going to need all of you to redouble your efforts in the months to come to fight for Arlen, because he's fighting for you and he's fighting for what's right.

I'm proposing we start developing right now a new and higher standard to take effect beginning 2017, so that we can make more and more progress in the years to come.

In the days that followed, the physician Little Havana knows as Dr.

In the weeks and months that followed, he battled to recover from traumatic brain injury.

In the years that followed, New Orleans could have remained a symbol of destruction and decay ; of a storm that came and the inadequate response that followed.

In the years that have followed, the space race inspired a generation of scientists and innovators, including, I'm sure, many of you.

In the coming days and weeks we'll be convening a series of meetings with senior administration officials here at the White House to further explore some of the key issues that were raised today and to bring more voices into the conversation.

In the coming days and weeks, I'll be launching other aspects of the plan.

In the coming weeks we're going to be rolling out a new online database, which Claire McCaskill proposed and helped pass into law.

In the coming weeks, states will be able to compete for what we're calling a Race to the Top award.

In the coming weeks, we're also going to appoint some of the nation's best managers and public officials to work with the Vice President on this effort.

In the coming years and decades, this miracle would spread throughout the region, and in a single generation the lives and fortunes of millions were forever changed for the better.

It is with that vision of a brighter future for this city and for the country that we begin this project, and I am looking forward to seeing all that you achieve in the years and months to come.

It happens because the American people decide it's time to move forward: because you decide it's time for change: because you're willing to face the future without fear.

It was for them, as it is for us, difficult, in the dead of winter, to sometimes see spring coming.

It's a plant that will create thousands of construction jobs in the next few years, and some 800 permanent jobs well-paying permanent jobs in the years to come.

It's going to be Kathleen's job and Nancy's job to work with extraordinary leaders, like the ones on this stage, to make sure that we finally deliver health care reform that will save our federal budget and help American families for generations to come.

It's that we're putting Americans to work doing the work that America needs done ???- in critical areas that have been neglected for too long ; work that will bring real and lasting change for generations to come.

It's why many of the folks in this room fought so hard to ensure that the Recovery Act included unprecedented investments ???- a total of $ 2 billion ???- to upgrade and expand our health centers ???- investments that embody the act's core mission : to help folks hardest hit by this recession, to put people back to work, and to leave a legacy of improvements that will continue to lift up communities for generations to come.

Long gone are the days when a high school diploma could guarantee a job at a local factory not when so many of those factories had moved overseas.

May we all find comfort in a verse of Scripture that reminds me of our dear friend : ???The time of my departure has come.

More states are expected to do so in the coming weeks.

More than a century has passed since Congressman White left Congress.

Not a minute has gone by that he has n't thought about how do build an economy not just for the present but for future generations.

Not a single day goes by where I do n't think about all the time and the energy, the money, the commitment, the unyielding faith that you put into our campaign because it was n't just about winning an election ; it was about changing a country.

Now is the time for us to leave for the next generation and generations to come a stronger and more prosperous country.

Now, in the coming days and weeks, my administration will be announcing more details about the kinds of transportation projects that will be launched as part of the recovery plan.

Now, it is our fervent hope that in the coming weeks, Chrysler will find a viable partner and GM will develop a business plan that will put it on a path to profitability without endless support from American taxpayer.

Now, we know that these investments in research will improve and save countless lives for generations to come.

On the other hand, if we just throw money at poorly planned projects or failing schools, then we'll remain in debt to those same countries for decades to come.

Patrick's Day) at the White House, on a day when springtime is in the air ???- and this is even though the Taoiseach has n't even shared his shamrocks yet, but we can feel spring coming.

Payment deadlines suddenly move.

So I hope everybody keeps them in their thoughts and prayers in the days to come.

So in the weeks to come, the signs denoting these projects are going to bear the new emblem of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

So legislation of this magnitude deserves the scrutiny that it's received, and all of you will get another chance to vote for this bill in the days to come.

So let me be clear : Those days have passed.

So on this September day, I would like to offer a toast to what can be in the years to come a place where we forge common ground and recognize our common humanity, a source of moral authority, a force for peace, and above all, an indispensable institution in helping all of us build a better future for our children and our grandchildren.

So this plan does more to lay a new foundation for our cities' growth and opportunity than anything Washington has done in generations and it will bring real and lasting change for generations to come.

So, in the weeks and months that followed, we undertook a series of difficult steps to prevent that outcome.

That's the strategy that we're going to be pursuing in the months and years to come.

That's two major victories in one week that will improve the lives of our people for generations to come.

That's what I'm going to ask you to continue in the weeks and months and years to come, as fellow travelers in this effort for us to perfect our union.

That's what the members of Congress here today will be voting on in the coming weeks.

That's what we're going to achieve in the weeks and months to come.

That's what will help our young people to fulfill their promise to realize their dreams and to help this nation succeed in the years to come.

The time for games has passed.

The time for games has passed.

The time for games has passed.

The time for games has passed.

The time for bickering has passed.

The time has come the time has come to re-launch negotiations without preconditions that address the permanent status issues : security for Israelis and Palestinians, borders, refugees, and Jerusalem.

The time has come to make that choice, to act on what we know.

The time has come to reaffirm our enduring spirit ; to choose our better history ; to carry forward that precious gift, that noble idea passed on from generation to generation : the God-given promise that all are equal, all are free, and all deserve a chance to pursue their full measure of happiness.

The time has come, once and for all, for this nation to fully embrace a clean energy future.

The urgency of the hour demands that we make common cause with all of America's workers white, black, brown all of whom are being hammered by this recession, all of whom are yearning for that spring to come.

The costs of health care are not going to come down overnight just because legislation passed, and in an ever-changing industry like health care, we're going to continuously need to apply more cost-cutting measures as the years go by.

The following month we lost 600, 000 jobs.

The pursuit of discovery half a century ago fueled our prosperity and our success as a nation in the half century that followed.

The question is, over the months and years to come, how do we encourage the strong and lasting economic growth required for America to lead in this new century ? Where are we going to find the growth necessary to help us address all of our priorities -??? from creating jobs and prosperity, to boosting our businesses and our workers, to improving our fiscal health and reducing our long-term deficits ?

The work you're doing will help power the American economy for years to come.

There are going to be some tough times to come.

There comes a time to remember the fierce urgency of right now.

There comes a time when the cup of endurance runs over.

These are all areas in which we intend to focus in the months and years to come.

These are trying days and they will grow tougher in the months to come.

They build up walls between us and the future that our people seek, and the time has come for those walls to come down.

They will double again in the coming decade.

They've created the template for more progress in the months and years to come.

This summer, the news came.

This coming Saturday, Hindus, Jains, Sikhs and some Buddhists, here in America and around the world, will celebrate this holiday by lighting Diyas, or lamps, which symbolize the victory of light over darkness, and knowledge over ignorance.

Those days are coming to an end.

To hasten the day when our troops will leave.

Ultimately, that's the purpose of the Recovery Act ???-not just to jumpstart the economy and get us out of the hole that we're in right now, but to make the investments that will spur growth and spread prosperity and pay dividends to our communities for generations to come.

Urgency fades, complacency grows, and time passes.

We have a host of members of Congress, but there's one that I have to single out because he is going to be helping to shape the agenda going forward to make sure that we have one of the strongest, most dynamic, and most innovative financial markets in the world for many years to come, and that's my good friend, Barney Frank.

We have massive structural deficits that have to be closed in the coming years.

We talked about how it threatened our national security because we're dependent on other countries for what makes our country run dependence that grew deeper with every passing year.

We want to create the infrastructure for the future not just roads and bridges but also the broadband lines and the smart grid lines that will ensure we stay competitively on top for years to come, creating hundreds of thousands of new jobs all across the country in the process.

We will make sure that America forever remains an idea and a place that's big enough and bold enough and brave enough to accommodate the dreams of all our children and all our people for years to come.
